Good afternoon

As a long time (client,player)

 i want to report a display of bad engagement and unreasonable behavior from a moderator at the discord that Keen Software House promote.

The warn that was made and the approach of this moderator was nothing but a display of bad attitude and abuse of power.

By answering and adding a comment to a previous message I have used a common tag of discord "@everyone" I didn't made any notification or did any spam at said discord (and I was aware of this. By using this tag that would not happen), I used the tag because in the chat the color would be more visible and grab more attention.

Attention to a bug report, a improvement that must be made in the game in order for players have a better experience in the game.
 The moderator in question just stood from a position that this was a bad practice, I would like to know what kind of bad practice that is, since the Platform Discord have rules and roles to prevent this "bad practices". Some moderators have a lack of knowledge and preparation to this kind of "contact with the client", and this is not the first time I have seen this display of behavior from moderators (not all hopefully).

For @everyone a post to improve the game experience of SE players across Multiplayer servers. If you vote in this post will boost its priority and solve this "problem" faster. Thx in advance for those that took time to read this little text.

2 👍 I have the same bug

Please don't try and use everyone. First off there's over 30k people here and it would cause chaos. Then everyone would be upset you pinged everyone. Finally it's extremely bad practice to do everyone in a server you don't own

TLDR: You tried and failed to ping everyone and if you do it again I'll warn you

Everyone is blocked to roles. so whats the point of this message? and btw. that was a copy paste from other server.

Bad practice

especially in servers you don't own or moderate Doesn't matter if it's locked to roles or not

Logic: not found.
As i said. the fact i type @everyone wont change anything, bad practice or not. Unless you are blocking freedom of speech around here. Keen moderators tend to have a lack of preparation to make useless warnings around here.
+ pointing out a problem would be something of "your" interest. You could warn me that i posted something related to a problem in the wrong channel (that would be understandable) but keen discord have so many useless channels... and not even one related to bugs/reports. Improvement channels? 0 (zero). So instead of making (Bad practice warnings) more like a joke. Promote Improvement practices. Keen should really make better selections for moderator roles.

if you find it funny I can always upgrade that to a mute

Emperor of Mankind Today at 14:55
i really dont care. you do not accept criticism. your problem.
your "warn" have no meaning. because i didnt do anything that damaged anything around here. nor posted anything wrong.
and for your info. i just printed this conversation
